

Chinese New Year

The Great Race	Chinese New Year	China
Each year's Chinese New Year is named after a different animal.	Chinese New Year is celebrated each year on a date between January and February. This date changes every year.	China has The Great Wall of China.
This comes from a legend of The Great Race where the Emperor of China raced 13 different animals.	A dragon is used in the celebrations and decorations. The dragon is said to bring luck.	A native animal to China is the giant panda.
This year is the year of the ox.	The decorations often feature the colour red as this colour is lucky to Chinese people.	The Chinese flag is red with gold stars on.

Key vocab	Definition
Compare	To find how things are the same or different.
Similarities	The way in which things are the same.
Differences	The way in which things are different.
Native	Being born and living in a particular place.
Celebrate	To mark a holiday or occasion in a special way.

